to buy drugs, is the cheap way. If medicine is to cure the sick, it must be the best and purest, and skill and experience are also necessary in the art of compounding physiwe employ registered clerks in our prescription depart-

We simply give you our name and let you draw your own

HONORING HEROES.

Full Program for Memorial Day Services.

Post 36 and Associates Will Devote the Day to Memory of Comrades of Former Years—School Children Will Join in Exercises.

Francis Gould Post 36 has arranged a full program for Memorial day this year.
To-morrow morning at nine o'clock, comrades and associates will assemble at Grand Army hall in full uniform and there will take barges for Belmont to attend church.

Next Thursday the schools in Arlington and Belmont will hold patriotic exercises, and these services also will be attended by the Grand Army. Barges for Belmont will leave the hall at eight o'clock, and for the schools in Arlington at one o'clock. Post 36 invites all soldiers and sailors not members, who are in town, to join in these services.

Friday morning, post 36, camp 45, S. of V. and associates will assemble at the hall at eight o'clock in full uniform and white gloves. At nine, a detail under command of S. V. C. A. H. Seaver will march to the Catholic cemetery.
There they will be met by children from Crosby school in charge of comrade Ira Kenniston, who will assist in decorating the graves. At the same time a second detail under O. G. H. W.
Berthrong will go to the old cemetery on Pleasant street. They will be assisted by a detail of children in the decoration of graves of comrades and Revolutionary soldiers. The comrades not detailed will go to the monument where appropriate services are to be held. At 9:30, on the sounding of the "no school" signal, the graves will be decorated simultaneously.

At ten o'clock the post will form and march to the "Maples" where they will be entertained at lunch by Mr. and Mrs.
E. Nelson Blake. Thence they will proceed to Mt. Pleasant cemetery, to be received by the school children in charge of Supt. Sutcliffe, and will decorate the graves there. The order of march will be: Police, camp 45, S. of V. band, associates and past-commanders.

After these ceremonies the Post will take barges for Belmont and hold memorial services in front of the town hall, after which the command and guests will be entertained as guests of the town of Belmont in the town hall.

At six o'clock, corps 43 will entertain the post at tea in Grand Army hall.
And at 7:45 the closing exercises of the day will be held in the town hall, Arlington, where the oration will be delivered by William H. Rider, D. D., of Gloucester. A chorus from the High school, under direction of Miss Blanche E. Heard, will sing.

THOMAS E. THORPE

Thomas E. Thorpe, whose death occurred Monday at his home, 30 Russell street, was born in New York city in 1817. His parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thorpe, came to Arlington when he was but six years old. Mr.
Thorpe married Miss Eliza Frost of Maine, in 1842. He leaves a wife and one son, William Henry, who resides at 30 Russell St. Thomas E. Thorpe jr., the older son, died five years ago. For twenty years Mr. Thorpe was sexton at the Unitarian church. Three years ago, while about his work in the church, he slipped and fell, breaking his right ankle, since which time he had been confined to his home. Mr. Thorpe was an industrious man, always doing faithfully and well whatever work he had in hand.

The funeral services of the deceased were held at the house Thursday morning at 12 o'clock, conducted by Rev.
Frederic Gill, pastor of the Unitarian church. Interment was in Mt. Pleasant cemetery. Mr. Thorpe was the last one of his father's family.

WILLIAM A. SEAVEY

William A. Seavey died Tuesday at his home on Court street, after an illness of two years. Mr. Seavey was born in Charlestown in 1836 and resided there until 1890, in which year he removed to Southbridge where he remained until 1900. In this year he came to Arlington. Mr. Seavey married Miss Carrie Jones, a native of Maine.
He leaves a wife, two daughters and one son, a lad five years old. Both his father and mother are living, and reside at 30 Russell street. The deceased was the son of William Seavey formerly of the firm of Brown, Seavey and Co., Boston.
Mr. Seavey was superintendent of the large stable of John P. Squires at East Cambridge. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum, and a member of the Baptist church.

The funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the house, Rev. Dr.
Watson officiating. Interment was in Newton cemetery.

The Arlington Historical society has adjourned over until September.

Cassidy, S. Brown, E. H. Clark.

J. Howard Richardson and family left yesterday for Kennerma, Massachusetts, where they will spend a three weeks' visit.
Grace Richardson is expected from Vassar to join them there.

About 7:30 o'clock one evening this week, while answering an alarm of fire, Second Assistant Chief Nathan L. Hussey had a narrow escape from serious injury. At Merrimac and Stanfield streets the forward axle of his buggy broke short off, and the chief was thrown to the pavement. He had hold of the reins and was dragged 30 feet or more. Hoseman Jones, of engine 26, who was temporarily acting as driver, was thrown against the chief, but, catching hold of the buggy, managed to escape being thrown. Jones sprang up, and, running ahead, caught the horse by the head, thereby preventing a runaway.
The street was full of people, and the wheel of the buggy shooting ahead struck Joseph P. Quigley, 30 years old, of Thomas street, Belmont, inflicting a bad scalp wound. Mr. Quigley has been confined to his bed this week, but is doing nicely.

The regular memorial exercises of post 36, G. A. R., will be held in the town hall next Friday. The exercises will include decoration services at the memorial tablet, a banquet served by the town in the town hall, followed by a memorial address by Rev. S. C. Bushnell, of Arlington.

The Belmont High School Literary and Debating society held a debate during the third and fourth periods, Wednesday. The subject was, "Resolved, that a lawyer is justified in trying to acquit a client whom he knows to be guilty." Olive Reed led the affirmative and Robert Ross the negative. After long and careful consideration, the judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

last meet but it is understood that he has since cooled off.

PARTED BY TRIFLES

HONEYMOON QUARRELS SOMETIMES END IN SEPARATION.

Trivial Things That Have Strewn the Sea of Matrimony With the Wrecks of Married Lives Before the Voyage Was Fairly Begun.

"The only reliable thing in marriage is its uncertainty," Douglas Jerrold once remarked in a cynical moment, and, like many sayings to which one may object, this aphorism contains at least an elementary truth. It is a curious fact that while some matrimonial barks survive fifty or more years of voyaging and come safely into harbor at last others are wrecked before they leave the still waters of the honeymoon.

This was the fate of a couple known to the writer who were married a few years ago under the brightest of auspices and for whom their friends predicted nothing but happiness. The very first day of the honeymoon their wedded lives came to an abrupt and tragic termination from the simplest of causes.

The bride had brought with her on the honeymoon a parasol of a vivid, aggressive red color, to which her husband objected. He begged her not to use it, but she persisted. The dispute grew warmer and warmer, heated words were exchanged, until at last in an impulse of anger the bridegroom snatched the sunshade out of his wife's hands and threw it into the sea.

Thus ended their life together, for the indignant young wife took the next train to her mother's home, and from that day to this the foolish people have never met.

In another case, known professionally to the writer, a dispute as to the pronunciation of a word completely wrecked the married life of a young couple and brought their little tragedy into the light of the law courts.

It came out in evidence that during the honeymoon the bridegroom had ventured to correct the bride, who had mispronounced a word at the breakfast table. She resented the correction, maintaining that she was right and her lord and master wrong. The argument thus begun ended in a bitter quarrel, during which each disputant no doubt said things which had much better have been left unsaid, with the result that the silly couple separated, each refusing to yield to the other.

Efforts were made by their friends and relatives to heal the breach, but to no purpose, and the little tragedy ended in a judicial separation.

It seems almost incredible that people should allow their lives to be wrecked by such trivial causes, but in both these cases actual fact proves stranger even than fiction.

More ludicrous, if not more trivial, was the cause that separated a couple who were united less than a year ago.
In a suit by a husband for the restitution of conjugal rights the wife declared that it was impossible to live with the plaintiff "because he snored so dreadfully."

"But, surely," the judge remarked,
"this is not a sufficient reason for staying away from your husband?" "You would think it was, my lord," the lady replied, "if you lived with him. I couldn't get a wink of sleep in any part of the house, and even the neighbors complained of his snoring. It will kill me if I have to go back."

Unreasonable suspicions have contributed as much as any cause to the undoing of husbands and wives. In one domestic tragedy which was unfolded in the law courts a few years ago a newly married wife had received a letter addressed in a masculine hand. The husband, who was of a jealous temperament, demanded to see the letter, which the wife refused to show him.

High words ensued, and in a moment of uncontrollable passion the husband struck his wife, with the result that she went home to her parents and refused to live with him again.

The most tragic and dramatic part of the story was the lady's statement in court that the letter which had caused all the trouble had been written by her brother.

A clergyman told the writer that he once married a rustic couple whose matrimonial life terminated at the church door at the conclusion of the wedding ceremony.

It appears that the bridegroom had discovered that his bride had sold her mangle, which had been one of the chief inducements to marry her, and she had made an equally disappointing discovery that her swain had sold a handsome clock on which she had set her heart. Thus were two lives wrecked by a mangle and a clock, however strange and foolish it may seem.

In another case a young widow who had married an elderly bachelor who was reputed to be wealthy found after her marriage that her false lover had parted with every penny of his fortune in purchasing an annuity for his own life and was so disgusted with his meanness that she left him to the undisturbed enjoyment of his annuity.

One recalcitrant husband gave as a reason for declining to live with his wife the discovery that the hair which had constituted her chief charm in his eyes was false and that he could no longer either love or respect a wife who had so deceived him.—London Tit-Bits.

THE ALLIGATOR.

He Is Always In Good Humor When Catching Flies.

"The alligator is a funny beast," said the old circus man. "The old fellow we have in the menagerie is a cross tempered chap. Often at feeding time he won't open his mouth, and we tickle the top of his nose. An alligator's nose is very sensitive, and it always makes him very mad. He throws back his upper jaw like a cellar door on hinges. Then we throw in a chunk of beef, five pounds or so, and repeat the performance until we've filled him up with about twenty-five pounds, which it takes to give him a square meal.

"He's never cross when he's fly catching. That always puts him in good humor. One would think a fly a small tidbit for an alligator, but they eat them wholesale. Our old alligator is an expert fly catcher. He throws back his upper jaw and goes to sleep apparently. The flies light on his upper jaw, and he waits until it is pretty well covered with flies—until its red color seems about changed to black.
Then suddenly he slams down his upper jaw, and he has a fine mouthful of flies. Alligators would make excellent flytraps for houses where there are no children, except that they are expensive, as they consume such a vast quantity of beef."—Houston Post.

Talking For Buncombe.

The expression was used toward the close of the famous debate on the Missouri compromise in the sixteenth congress (1821). Buncombe, a county in the western section of North Carolina, was then part of the congressional district represented by Felix Walker, a resident of Waynesville, in the adjacent county of Haywood.

The house was impatient to bring the long debate to an issue when old man Walker (he was then sixty-eight years of age) rose to speak, and he was greeted with loud clamors for "Question." Several members gathered around him, begging him to desist; others left the hall, but he kept the floor, declaring that the people of his district expected a speech from him, that he was bound to talk for Buncombe (or words to that effect), and he did.

This Felix Walker had been in his younger days the friend and companion of Daniel Boone when the latter explored Kentucky and founded Boons-borough. After representing North Carolina from 1817 to 1823 he was a member of the state legislature and died in 1830 a short time after removing to Mississippi.

German Birthday Cakes.

The custom of having a birthday cake is widespread in Germany. I know it for certain that it is prevalent in the province of Saxony, in Hanover and the mark of Brandenburg. As many lights as the one whose birthday it is has years are stuck around the cake, or the Torte, a thick one in the middle, called the Lebenslicht, the light of life. For persons advanced in years one candle must do duty, as otherwise too many would be required, or a skillful lady expresses the exact number of years in Roman figures (XX, L).

When Moltke completed his seven-

SECRETS OF PAST AGES.

Early History of Harvard Related by William C. Lane, Librarian of Harvard College—Replete with Historical Learning.

W. C. Lane, librarian at Harvard college, recently delivered an interesting paper before the Shepard Historical society, of Cambridge, on "The Early History of Harvard."

At the beginning of the lecture Mr.
Lane illustrated by using stereopticon views of the college, in different stages of its history. The views were 12 in number, beginning with several pictures taken in 1875 from the top of the recently completed Memorial hall and ending with the earliest known picture of Harvard, taken in 1726. One of the views was a plan of Cambridge in the vicinity of Harvard in 1750, showing a city far different in appearance from what it is today. The nature of the other views is shown pretty well from the comments made by Mr.
Lane in his address, which follows in full.

In opening, the speaker apologized for reading before the Shepard Historical society a paper originally prepared for an Librarian of Harvard College.

audience of college students, and intended more especially for new comers in Cambridge, the paper being one of several designed to treat of the environment, physical and intellectual, as well as historical, into which youth enters when he becomes a member of Harvard university.

In speaking of this subject from the point of view of history and tradition, Mr. Lane continued: "I must be excused for not confining myself to any one topic.
I shall at least try to put some emphasis on the continuity of college history and make more real the fact that for these last 285 years all that we read about the college and some of what we know of Massachusetts and colonial history has been taking place on this very spot where we pass back and forth every day, and that even of light and leading, whose names are household words, have been living during the last two centuries and a half as youths in this place just as familiarly as we live in it, and have called it theirs, just as we consider it ours.

Let us try then to set ourselves back in earlier times and call up before us the scene and something of the life at different epochs. And instead of going back to the beginning and coming down to the present, I will ask you to start at the present and run back by easy stages, watching how one familiar sight after another drops away.

First, then, let us look at the college at the beginning of 1875, only 27 years back, and we shall find everything tolerably familiar. Out of the faculty of 48, 17 members remain in the faculty of today, but of the present faculty of 113, the dean and 76 others graduated from college since 1875. In the college yard we only miss Phillips Brooks' words, the Fogg museum, Sever hall, and the eastern wing of the library.

Go back now another 25 years to 1850.
To the north of Kirkland street no college building will be found except the Lawrence Scientific school, just built a year before, and Divinity hall, built in 1826.
In the college yard you must pull down Thayer, Weld, Grays and Matthews, also Appleton chapel and Boylston not built until 1857 and 1858. University stands alone on the east side of the yard with the library beyond, and the law school occupies Dane hall, as in fact it continued to do till 1883. Jared Sparks, the historian, is president, and lives in the big square house, corner Kirkland and Quincy, which has this fall been moved to make room for the little stone church opposite Randall hall. Up to this time, 1849, the presidents since Wadsworth, in 1726, had lived in Wadsworth house.

Another jump back to 1824 and we are still within the limit of living ties, for it was in this year that the present oldest living alumnus of the college, Rev. Joseph W. Cross, now of Worcester, of the class of 1828, entered college. When young Jo Cross, then of East Bridgewater, a boy of 16, came here in 1824, Gore hall was not yet built, and the college library was still in Harvard hall; there were no college buildings east of University hall and no college buildings of any kind north of Broadway. On the other side of the yard College house, at first called Graduates' hall, and built in 1832 disappears, and one is not sorry, for in the succeeding 70 years it has added no beauty to the scene.

On the present site of Dane hall, but extending into the square stands the Congregational meeting house built in 1757, but preceded by other church buildings on the same spot back to 1650. Here the commencement exercises were held and here in this same year Lafayette was received with boundless enthusiasm, an event of which Quincy, class of 1852, gives such a delightful account in his "Figures of the Past." The Med Fac flourished and the Washington Corps and the Engine Co.

Dr. Peabody (old Dr. Peabody), class of 1826, was in college at this time, and gives delightful accounts in his "Harvard Reminiscences" and "Harvard Graduates I Have Known," of men and manners. Lowell's "Cambridge Thirty Years Ago" refers to the same epoch, when Dr. Kirkland was the president, of whom so many good stories are told.

The appearance of the college and of the common in 1810 is shown in two watercolors (the next views shown), lately presented to the college library. The date of the next view is 1795, and University, Holworthy and Stoughton disappear.
Harvard, Massachusetts and Hollis with Holden chapel and Wadsworth house (the president's house) alone remaining. The meeting house stands on the corner and the minister's house fronts on Harvard street, about opposite the present library.
Back again to 1775 and the Continental army is encamped on Cambridge common and all the college buildings are occupied by the soldiers; the students and the library in the meantime being removed to Concord, whence they did not return till June, 1776, an interval of 11 months.
The group of college buildings remains the same except that a new one appears, the old Stoughton hall, built in 1700, now (1775) going to ruin and soon after (1780) taken down. It stood directly in the middle of the present yard, forming with Massachusetts and Harvard three sides of a square which was the college yard of that day.
Back again to 1750, date of this map.
Hollis, built in 1753, disappears, and in place of Harvard we find the old Harvard hall which was burnt in 1764.
The next is the earliest view of the college known, and takes us back another 25 years to 1726, the year in which Wadsworth house was built. Massachusetts, the oldest of our present buildings, stands here in the freshness of youth and newness, built only six years before by the provincial government on the site where it is thought the president's house had stood, until that time. Stoughton is 25 years old, built in 1700 by old Judge Stoughton, a graduate of the class of 1650, a famous man of his day, the special agent of the colony in 1679 to carry important communications to the king, Lieutenant-governor of the province seven years, the chief justice of the special court constituted to try the Salem witches in 1692, the largest benefactor of the college in the 17th century who spent £100 on this building, and at his death left the college a pasture in Dorchester and a parcel of salt meadow to support a scholarship. (I notice on the calendar that the scholarship fund is still accumulating.)
Harvard is the oldest of these three buildings, (the only ones that composed the college at this time) begun in 1672, and finished in 1682.
As we pass the year 1720 in our backward course and Massachusetts disappears, we lose all matterial connection between early times and ours. Yet even then none of the original buildings were standing. It is impossible to determine even the exact site of the earliest building and of the so called Indian college, which preceded the Harvard hall of this view, or New college, as it was first called.

And now that we have got back to the earlier chapters of our history, let us note some of the conditions that surrounded the first planting of the college before we try to picture the college itself.

The Pilgrims, you will remember, had come from England on the Mayflower having previously been some years in Holland) and had settled in Plymouth in 1620. Between that year and 1629 struggling settlements, weak in numbers and undisciplined with means and so not destined to flourish, had been made at Weymouth, Hull and Mt. Wollaston and at Cape Ann, and individuals had planted themselves on one of the harbor islands.
On the peninsula where Charlestown is located, and even on the site of Boston. In 1629, however, came the Salem company, 400 strong, under John Endicott, and the next year came Winthrop with 700 or 800.
Increased soon to 1000. Touching first at Salem, they moved on and planted the village which became Charlestown, but water becoming scarce, they finally transferred their settlement to Trimoun-tain or Shawmut, and called it Boston.

The 100 settlers were soon joined by another 1000 and within nine years there was a population of some 9000 persons scattered in different settlements from Hingham on the south to Dover on the north, and as far west as Springfield, and by 1643 the immigration to New England amounted to about 20,000. It was the transfer of a whole people, but the notable thing about these settlements was the number of college men in them.
Between 1630 and 1639 at least 60 individuals came over of whom three-quarters remained permanently in the Massachusetts bay colony, and half of these 40 or 50 were settled within five miles of Boston and Cambridge. Before 1640 30 had emigrated and of these 70 were from the University of Cambridge, and 20 from Emanuel college there. Cambridge, and especially Emanuel, was the hotbed of Puritanism, and here were educated all the more noted Separatists who had a university training from Cambridge, too, came Cromwell, Fairfax and Milton, while at Oxford Laud was fellow and president of St. John's from 1604-21 and very different principles were in the ascendant.

The table taken from Prof. Dexter's article in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, gives the names of the Cambridge graduates that came to New England, and shows their colleges and their dates. From 1596 for forty years there were never less than three, sometimes 20 or more of the future immigrants domiciled there together. It is interesting to note some of their influences. Henry Dunster, a high-born man, was at Christ church from 1625 to 1632, and at the same time were living in other colleges at Cambridge Thomas Shepard, later the pastor of the First church, in this Cambridge, and Henry Duster, first president of Harvard college, Roger Williams, the founder of Rhode Island, John Norton, Abraham Pierson and John Harvard, as well as Jeremy Taylor.

Peter Bulkeley, the first pastor at Concord, was a fellow of St. John's, while the great Earl of Strafford was there as a student. Chauncey, the second president of the college, and Geo. Herbert were both fellows of Trinity.

No wonder, then, that a community in which men of this stamp were the leaders lost no time in providing the means of education. It was in 1636, accordingly, under the governorship of young Sir Harry Vane, that the fascinating and high-born Republican and puritan though his father was comptroller of the king's household, who came over to Massachusetts in 1635, at the age of 23, and so influenced the sober inhabitants of the town that they straightway elected him to that office in the revered John Winthrop's place—it was under his presidency that the general court on Oct. 25, 1636, agreed to give 400 pounds towards a school or college, whereof 200 pounds to be paid the next year, and 200 pounds when the work was finished, and the next court to appoint where and what building. The next year, John Winthrop being again governor, on Nov. 15 the college was "or-

CAUTION IN CRITICISING.

If war were a pastime, like football, it might be well to criticise its worst features in the severest way, but great care should be taken to be sure that the grounds of criticism are stated truthfully, and that the things criticised were needless, under the circumstances. That the facts have been grossly exaggerated is becoming plain, and it is becoming equally plain that it is not easy for men who have never carried a musket or endured the dangers of war to pass a correct judgment upon those who are on the grounds.

General Howard is known the world over as a Christian soldier of the highest type, and of large experience in actual war. But in an article in the Independent of this week, answering the question, "Is Cruelty Inseparable from War?" he says: "These things are incident to war and seem a part of it. In dealing with savages often great severity has to be used to protect the lives of the helpless and innocent. As the world advances there will be better methods. If we employ Indians or Macabebes, uncivilized or half-civilized people, to be our scouts or allies, we shall always be subjected to the charge of cruelties and methods of warfare which every true American abominates, but I think when we have rising up against our flag and country organized mobs and robbers who bury their enemies alive, subject them not only to horrible deaths, but to preliminary tortures, and when those so-called 'enemies' are worthy people, hurting nobody, but looking to our army for protection, that we ought to be very careful not to condemn the army for severe measures which appear to be necessary.
An army or a police means the exercise of force. If we mean that it shall never exercise force, then why have an army or a police at all?"

VERY CONSIDERATE.

Mayor Glines, of Somerville, declines to run against Congressman McCall. His statement to the public is a remarkable one, in some of its phrases. He regrets that the congressman doesn't agree with McKinley and Roosevelt policies, and proceeds to say:

"I recognize the fact that this district, containing Harvard college and the best elements of our country's population—practically without a pauper or slum or low element of society of any kind—must be represented by a statesman, and I look upon Mr. McCall as a statesman. Being such, and being so well equipped mentally, the people can ill afford to lose him, and he should be allowed to exercise his best judgment in dealing with the great questions of the day."

It is really very kind of Mr. Glines to make this concession. If the district didn't have Harvard college in it, and had a few slums, he would probably prefer a politician who agreed with McKinley and Roosevelt, but as we must have a statesman, to please these elements, he should be allowed to use his own judgment! Is that it?

dered to be at Newtowne," and presently the name of Newtowne was changed to Cambridge.

The earliest account in print of the first founding of the college is that contained in a little pamphlet printed in London, in 1642, "published at the instant request of sundry friends," by certain "New England men" then in England. It is entitled "New England's First Fruits," and though the paragraphs in relation to the college may be familiar to many of you, they cannot be read too often.

(Mr. Lane then read a selection from the pamphlet referred to.)

Of Mr. Harvard, the goodly gentleman and lover of learning, we know but little, and that little has been almost entirely discovered within fifteen years by H. F. Waters of the class of 1835. By diligent search in old registers and wills, Mr. Waters has shown that John Harvard was born in Southwark, London, in November, 1607, and was baptized in the church of St. Saviour's. His father, Robert Harvard, was a butcher, his mother, Katharine Rogers, came from Stratford, where the house where she was born still stands, the finest old house in Stratford, on the main street, and not far from Shakespeare's "New Place." Robert Harvard died in 1625, the year of the plague, when, as John Evelyn says in his diary, "the pestilence was so epidemical that there died in London 5000 a week." His wife soon married again, her second husband being John Eilstone, a draper, who lived less than six months, and dying, left property to his widow. A third husband was Richard Yearwood, a grocer, ings now used for storage or sometimes for dressing-rooms, being designed for studies (Massachusetts hall was the name). From the small amount of the register's bill it seems likely that some sashes or parts of all sashes were unglazed but filled with paper. All but one or two of the chambers had no artificial heat, and to the hall became a common sitting room and study also—a social advantage which the college lost in later and more prosperous times, and which the Harvard union, it is thought, will give us again. At first it would appear that each student brought his own candle, but this proved inconvenient, and later a charge is made on the students' bills for the public candle.

That the college had a goody appears from an entry in the corporation records, "that Old Mary be yet connived at to be in the college, with a charge to take heed to do her work undertaken, and to give content to the college students." In certain orders written 28th of March, 1660, the butler and cook must see "that all the rooms peculiar to their offices, together with their appurtenances, be daily set and kept in order, clean and sweet from all manner of offensiveness, and nastiness, or sensible offensiveness, and they must see that the college utensils, to their several offices belonging, from day to day be kept clean and sweet and fit for use, and they shall at meal times deliver them out as the public service of the hall requireth, but they are not bound to keep or cleanse any particular scholar's spoons, cups or such like, and each student, we read elsewhere at a later date, was obliged to bring his own knife, which he was allowed to wipe on his tablecloth. They must not suffer any scholar or scholars whatever, except the fellows, masters of art, fellow commoners or officers of the house to come into

this extension of its designs, and the commissioners on this side, who evidently were favorably inclined to the college's request. It was finally proposed by the England society that six hundred Indians should be trained up at the college, to which the commissioners replied that the college ought to be able to do this, for the English students, they would be obliged to erect a building there, to carry out the proposal and without more ado, they authorized the erection of a building of the same size, two stories high, built plain but strong and durable, for the benefit of the six hundred Indian youths. So a building was secured; its form seems to have been modified as it proceeded, and though it did not for some time become a model for the Indians who were being educated at the local school or even at the college, most of them got discouraged before they were ready to enter college, and only one graduated, a member of the class of 1665, and he, poor fellow, died the next year. As a means of educating the Indians, the Indian college was a failure, but that did not prevent its being very useful in other ways, and some years later, Mr. Cookin wrote, it has "hitherto been principally improved for to accommodate English scholars and for placing and using a printing press belonging to the college." The Indian college, built till 1665, when the society which had built it agreed that the bricks belonging to the Indian college which is gone to decay and become altogether useless, should be used toward a new building, provided studies should be furnished, rent for the scholars' ordinary commons, which might thereafter be sent to college. It would be interesting to see if the Corporation would consider itself still bound by this agreement should an Indian from Hampton or Carlisle come to Harvard today. The bricks, I ought to have said, were sold for 20 pounds and the proceeds used on the cellar of the first Stoughton building. The old building, the first Harvard college, did not last so long as this. Its continual need of repairs has been already mentioned. In 1663 its condition as well as the whole situation of the college had become critical. Political affairs in England were distinctly unfavorable—it was even feared that the college's charter might be withdrawn—and the general court could give no relief. Under these discouragements the town of Portsmouth, N. H., was the first to extend a helping hand. An address from the town to the general court, dated May, 1668, expressed the town's gratitude for the protection Massachusetts had extended to it, and declared that the loud groans of the sinking college had come to their ears and that they hoped their example might provoke the rest of the country to a holy emulation in so good a work. The town thereupon pledged itself, as the result of voluntary contributions of its inhabitants, to pay 50 pounds a year for seven years. Measures were immediately adopted for raising subscriptions throughout the colony, and the result was the promise of 200 pounds, a truly generous sum for the place and time. Mr. Adams points out that the contribution of 27,146 pounds made by Braintree, amounted to 60 per cent of the annual tax levy. The same proportion of the present tax levy of the towns then included in Braintree would be $18,000.

With this encouragement a new building was begun in 1672, which, however, try at large, and what an irreparable one it seemed.

An entertaining glimpse of this building in 1891 is given by two Dutchmen, Dummer and Sluiter, who visited Boston. At this time the college had no president, and its general state seems to have been pretty desperate, but due allowance must be made for the fact that these gentlemen spoke and understood no English, and that their comments on all they saw were almost uniformly depreciatory.

I have left myself little or no time to speak of any other subjects. Were I only still at the beginning of my hour, instead of the end of it, I would discourse to you of Nathaniel Eaton, the schoolmaster in Cambridge, to whom the care of building Harvard college was at first entrusted, and who, with his wife, had charge of the first students, though never with the title of president—a blade, Mather calls him, who marvelously deceived the expectations of men concerning him, and though his avarice was notorious, yet his cruelty was more scandalous than his avarice. Mrs. Eaton, too, whose house-keeping was not above criticism, and who was perhaps constrained by her husband's avarice to be near in the providing of food, I can only refer you to Winthrop's account of Eaton, and to the appendix of Pelce's History, where you will find her confession one of the most extraordinary and entertaining documents that can be imagined. Of the pious and learned and devoted Dunster, our first president, who drew up rules and statutes for the college and labored unceasingly for its good, yet unfortunately, as Mather says, falling into the briars of antiquated baptism and not being able to refrain from bearing insistent witness to his views in meeting, was obliged by the general court after 14 years' service, to leave his office. Of his successor, the laborious and faithful Chauncy, who died at 22, of the slender means, the difficulties and discouragements of their lives and their unwavering devotion to their charges, of their successors—of Leverett, who governed well, with us and for us, as Dr. Williams, of 1713, told President Stiles, of Yale, long after of Holyoke, who presided over us for 32 years, closing his term in 1769, under whom, as I have said, all the leaders of the revolutionary side of the Revolution in Massachusetts, with a single exception, had been students. Sam Adams, graduated in 1740, Jos. Otis in 1743, Jonathan Mayhew and Thos. Gushing in 1744, Jas. Bowdoin in 1755, John Hancock in 1754, John Adams in 1755, Joseph Warren in 1759, Josiah Quincy in 1763, and others only less distinguished. It was in Holyoke's day, too, that Jonathan Edwards' preaching shook the country, and that Whitefield visited us, preaching under the elm on the common at his second coming, because the Cambridge pulpits were closed to him on account of what was considered his unchristian testimony against the moral conduct of the college. It should like to praise all these famous men, but I can only refer you to Pelce's History and Quincy's and Gov. Winthrop's Journal, and Judge Sewall's Diary, and other books of the same kind, and bid you look them up yourselves.

President Stiles, of Yale, whose diary has just been published, gives some entertaining glimpses of Harvard doings, for he kept a close watch of us and was constantly comparing the number of students, the cost of living etc., and he often came up here to attend commencement.

In 1770, he writes, the bachelors all drove in black cloth coats of American manufacture, covered with a thin black gown and square cap.

Dialogue in Chaldee held between three bachelors. President subjoined a short speech in Chaldee.

1771. Dialogue in Greek and another in Samaritan. 62 bachelors and 38 masters were given degrees. I suppose this was more than ever graduated at one commencement in America.

1773. Dialogue in Arabic and an oration in the Indian language, by an Indian missionary.

In 1774, agreed to omit the public commencement on account of the calamities of the times.

1780. We are informed that they have just about 100 undergraduates present at Harvard college, while commons is 45 pounds or $150 per week.

130 students at Yale at same time.)

I could entertain you I think for hours with extracts from the ancient laws or the old records of the college and passages from early private journals that illuminate the social and scholastic life of the place. The history of methods of discipline, for example, forms a most interesting chapter. Flogging, attended by prayer, was the primitive means of grace. Old Judge Sewall, in his diary in 1674, reports that Thos. Sargent was examined by the corporation and was convicted of speaking blasphemous words against the Holy Ghost, but no matter. Sargent was condemned, 1, to be publicly whipped before all the scholars; 2, to be suspended as to taking his degree of bachelor of arts; 3, to sit by himself in the hall under the meals, during the pleasure of the president and fellows. The sentence was put in execution in the library. The culprit knelt down and Goodman Hely wielded the instrument at the president's word, who offered prayer before and after. The corporation records bear witness to frequent occasions of the same kind. Just when this method of punishment was discontinued I do not know, but when the laws of the college were revised in 1734, the practice of boxing was retained though the exercise of it was expressly reserved to the president, professors and tutors. At the same time, and later many misdemeanors were punished by fines, but about the middle of the 18th century pecuniary mulcts, as Quincy calls them, began to be considered objectionable. Although little regarded by the students, they were very annoying to their parents. The official list of offences for which "pecuniary mulcts" were collected specified 52 separate misdemeanors and extended from absence from prayers, 2d, going to the practice of the law, 3d, going to a gaming house, 4th, going to a gaming house, 5th, going to a gaming house, 6th, going to a gaming house, 7th, going to a gaming house, 8th, going to a gaming house, 9th, going to a gaming house, 10th, going to a gaming house, 11th, going to a gaming house, 12th, going to a gaming house, 13th, going to a gaming house, 14th, going to a gaming house, 15th, going to a gaming house, 16th, going to a gaming house, 17th, going to a gaming house, 18th, going to a gaming house, 19th, going to a gaming house, 20th, going to a gaming house, 21st, going to a gaming house, 22nd, going to a gaming house, 23rd, going to a gaming house, 24th, going to a gaming house, 25th, going to a gaming house, 26th, going to a gaming house, 27th, going to a gaming house, 28th, going to a gaming house, 29th, going to a gaming house, 30th, going to a gaming house, 31st, going to a gaming house, 32nd, going to a gaming house, 33rd, going to a gaming house, 34th, going to a gaming house, 35th, going to a gaming house, 36th, going to a gaming house, 37th, going to a gaming house, 38th, going to a gaming house, 39th, going to a gaming house, 40th, going to a gaming house, 41st, going to a gaming house, 42nd, going to a gaming house, 43rd, going to a gaming house, 44th, going to a gaming house, 45th, going to a gaming house, 46th, going to a gaming house, 47th, going to a gaming house, 48th, going to a gaming house, 49th, going to a gaming house, 50th, going to a gaming house, 51st, going to a gaming house, 52nd, going to a gaming house.

century the life of a freshman must have been a busy one, for he was at the beck and call of all his seniors to do their errands.

A little manuscript book in the college library contains the college laws written out by a student, as every entering student had to write them out, and at the end are three pages of "College customs," which he put down as well for his guidance. These are some of the rules:

1. No freshman shall wear his hat in the College yard except it rains, snows, or hails, or he be on horse back or health both hands full.
2. No freshman shall wear his hat in his senior's Chamber or in his own if his senior be there.
3. No freshman shall go by his senior without taking his hat off if it be on.
4. No freshman shall intrude into his seniors Company.
5. No freshman shall laugh in his seniors face.

Hollises and other members of their family covering a period of 86 years, and all the great multitudes that have continued to pour their riches into the last of our Mother, sure that she will use them for the advancement of learning and the good training of her sons, and though she uses them with frugality and discretion, so rapidly do the demands upon her increase and her opportunities broaden out that her treasury is always painfully empty.

Fortunately, Harvard has never been bound by any religious test, and the corporation, true to its simple motto, "Veritas," has almost without exception stood consistently for liberality in matters of opinion even in times of stress and change when great pressure has been brought to bear by the strict Calvinists, who, through the 18th century and the first half of the 19th, were always in a majority on the board of overseers.

It is remarkable that the first profes-

6. No freshman shall talk saucily to his senior or speak to him with his hat on.
7. No freshman shall ask his senior an impertinent question.
8. Freshmen are to take notice that a senior's phister can take a freshman from a sophomore a middle Bachelor from a junior sophister a master from a senior sophister & a fellow from a master.
9. Freshmen are to find the rest of the scholars with bats, balls and foot balls.
10. Freshmen must pay three shillings apiece to the Butler, to have their names set up in the Buttery.
11. No freshman shall Litter by the [way] when he is sent of an errand, but shall make haste and give a direct answer when he is asked who he is going [for] no freshman shall use lying or equivocation to escape giving of an errand.
12. No freshman shall tell who is going, except he be asked, nor for what except he be asked by a fellow.
13. No freshman shall go away when he hath been sent of an errand before he be dismissed, which may be understood by saying, it is well, I thank you, you may go, or the like.
14. When a freshman knocks at his seniors door he shall tell name if asked who.
15. When anybody knocks at a freshmen's door he shall not ask who is there, but shall immediately open the door.
16. No freshman shall lean at prayers but shall stand upright.
17. No freshman shall call his class mate by the name of freshmen.
18. No freshman shall call up or down to or from his seniors chamber or his own.
19. No freshman shall call or throw anything across the college yard.
20. Freshmen may wear their hats at dinner and supper except when they go to receive there Commons of bread and bear.
21. Freshmen are so to carry themselves to their seniors in all respects so as to be in no wise saucy to them and when they are sent of an errand to receive any of these customs shall be severely punished.

Practically the same code of laws is written out in full in the faculty records in 181, so that it is plain that the system received the sanction of the immediate government (as it was called in those days.) This record closes with the paragraph:

The Sophomores shall publish these customs to the Freshmen in the Chapel, whenever ordered by any in the Government of the College, at which time the Freshmen are enjoined to keep their places in their seats and attend with decency to the reading.

In fact, the earliest record book of the faculty opens with this vote:

Cambridge, Sept. 24, 1725.

The President and Fellows agreed unanimously, to forbid ye Sophomores carrying ye Freshmen into any Chambers to admonish them on any account; but it is not hereby intended, to prohibit ye Sophomores in an orderly suitable way and in a suitable place, to acquaint ye Freshmen with such innocent or useful customs as they should observe.

It is an inspiring story, and often a touching one, to trace the stream of gifts that has flowed in upon the college from lovers of learning at home and abroad, beginning with John Harvard's modest but faithful legacy, Wm. Allen's two cows, Richard Dana's cotton cloth, the library left by Theophilus Gale, a fellow of Magdalen, Sir John Maynard's eight great chests of books, the £124 sent from the far Bahamas in token of gratitude for succor earlier sent to them, the lot of land in Boston given by Henry Webb in 1660 of little value then but now occupied by the store rented to Little & Brown and worth $15,000, the gifts from nonconformists in England which would have gone to Cambridge and Oxford had they not been bound by religious tests and the 39 articles, the splendid benefactions of the three successive Thomas sorship of divinity founded in Harvard college should have been founded by a Baptist, Thos. Hollis, of London, who must have known that his own theological views were not shared by the community who controlled the college, yet was willing to entrust to the corporation the administration of his foundation, only providing that adherence to any sectarian scheme of theology should not be required of the incumbent. The overseers did this, and the corporation, on the statutes of the professorship but were unsuccessful. Benjamin Colman, a correspondent of Hollis, said that Hollis's bounty was inspired by the "free and catholic air we breathe at Cambridge, where Protestants and every denomination may have their children educated." The corporation has always belonged to the liberal wing of the Congregational body in New England, and the college has been correspondingly hospitable to the advocacy of new methods and the unbiased investigation of truth.

I feel that what I have brought you has been of a very fragmentary nature, but that it might be handled in a single lecture, I could not bear to confine myself to any one. If by touching on many topics I have made you see that there are many interesting facts to be gleaned in this field, and if I persuade you to study the subject for yourselves, I shall be satisfied.

The study may help to make us, like many of our predecessors, "godly gentlemen and lovers of learning, enlarged toward our country and the good of it."

NEW FEATURES IN TAILOR-MADES.

Gown of Fancy Suiting and White Moire.

The material for this handsome street costume is a fancy suiting, but the skirt also be quite chic if developed of smooth finished cloth. Some of the newest features in tailor-mades, the basque or skirt, as well as the broad shoulder effect, are combined in this smart gown. The long rolling collar and the straps over the shoulder and around the bottom of the skirt are of moire. The revers and the extension vest are of white moire stitched with several rows of Corticelli silk; small buttons are set down the center of the vest, as well as on the fronts, and clusters of buttons are placed on the shoulder straps and the revers. The latter is quite novel, the fitted undersleeves of moire being completed with cloth oversleeves, flaring at the bottom. The skirt is laid in wide tucks and spreads out into a very full skirt at the hem.

As the seasons advances the preference for mixed and fancy suitings becomes more and more distinct and it seems almost as if the latter would in a very short time be used entirely instead of the smooth-finished cloths; although the cloth is by far the most dressy in appearance, it is of more compact and closer weave than the mixed suitings and homespun, which, together with Scotch tweeds and covert cloth are in the lead at present.

This is for YOU!

If I have not been successful in making clothes for you, it is because I have had no chance to make any.

If I make them at all, I know they will please you.

I make them to your satisfaction.

Is not this the sort of proposition you are looking for? Over 300 carefully selected, reliable, up-to-date Spring fabrics await your inspection.

And it's not a bit too soon to order your Spring 'togs.'

was not completed till 1682, owing to Indian wars. At first called the "New college," it took the name of its predecessor, Harvard, when that disappeared. Just when that happened does not seem to be known, but Cotton Mather wrote in 1697 of "a New college wearing still the name of the old one, which old one is now so mouldered away that Jam ses est ubi Troja fuit." This is the building which we saw in the earliest view presented on the screen, "a fair and stately edifice of brick," Hubbard calls it. We learn, too, that it "had 30 chambers for students, two in a chamber, a large hall which serves as a chapel; over that a convenient library with some few of the ancient fathers and school divines." This is the building which in 1764 was burned one cold winter night, during its occupation by the general court, that had left Boston on account of the smallpox there. Nearly the whole library was destroyed and the contemporary accounts of the calamity make one realize what a genuine misfortune it was to the coun-

dent, professors and tutors. At the same time, and later many misdemeanors were punished by fines, but about the middle of the 18th century pecuniary mulcts, as Quincy calls them, began to be considered objectionable. One other building of this earliest period demands brief notice, the Indian college, so called. The first building of all, built as it was of green wood, and no doubt at as little outlay as possible, built, too, in its earliest stage, under the superintendence of Nathaniel Eaton, who left behind him an unenviable reputation for dishonesty, cruelty and incompetence, this building almost immediately began to require repairs. As early as 1647 the expense of needed repairs was beyond what the college could provide (which shows that then, as now, the college lacked unrestricted income), and President Dunster applied to the commissioners of the United Colonies for help in these terms: "Seeing the first evil contrivance of the college building, there now ensues yearly decay of roof, walls and foundation, which the study rents will not carry forth to repair. Again and again the college was forced to apply for aid, until 30 years later the building became actually uninhabitable from the fall of a portion of it. In the meantime, however, as the college increased, rooms outside had to be found for the students. One student was accommodated in the president's house in the chamber over the printing press; others found lodgings in the town. At least one house was bought by the college, that of Edw. Goffe, situated on the corner of the old Harvard square (between Wadsworth and Dane, let us say) and was called Goffe's college. The records speak of other rooms "in the loft of that which was the schoolhouse." In 1661, application was made to the commissioners of the United Colonies, who had in charge the funds of the lately organized Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians, to see whether it would be consistent with the general encouragement and support of the Society to contribute to the expense of Indian missions. This was a somewhat delicate question and necessitated some correspondence between the society in England, naturally apprehensive of the butleries or kitchen save with their parents or guardians, or with some grave or sober stranger, and if any shall presume to thrust in, they shall have three pounds to their heads.

The building was finished or nearly so in 1642, the year of the first commencement, when Winthrop tells us in his journal, "Nine bachelors commenced at Cambridge. They were young men of good hope, and performed their acts so as to give good proof of their proficiency in the tongues and arts." Most of the magistrates and elders (who were the governing body of the college), Winthrop says, "were present at this first commencement, and dined at the college with the scholars' ordinary commons, which was done of purpose for the students' encouragement, etc., and it gave good content to all." The next year, 1643, Winthrop records that there was an assembly of the college, and the elders in the country (about 50 in all). They met in the college and had their diet there after the manner of scholars' commons, but somewhat better, yet so ordered as it came not to above sixpence, the meal for a person.

At the same time that the college was building, Dunster, the first president, was erecting a house for himself on the present site of Massachusetts hall, a house which Dunster says later in applying to the general court for relief, "was built upon very damnable conditions to myself, out of love for the college, taking country pay in lieu of bills of exchange on England, or the house would not have been built. The first president's house is interesting as being the site of the first printing office in New England, and for a collation of the facts in regard to this also we are indebted to Mr. Dana.

In 1638 the Rev. Joseph Glover sailed from England, bringing with him a printing press, types and a printer, Stephen Daye. On the voyage he died, and soon after President Dunster married the widow, so the press, under the direction of the magistrates and elders, came to be set up in the president's house, where it was worked by Stephen Daye, beginning in 1639. Here was printed the Freeman's Oath, then an Almanac, then in 1640 the "Psalms, newly turned into metre," the laws of Massachusetts in 1642, the "Platform of Church Discipline," catechisms and spelling books. Somewhat later the printing plant was enlarged at the expense of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians, and in 1658 that famous undertaking of the Cambridge press, the printing of the whole Bible translated into the language of the Massachusetts Indians, by John Eliot, several other translations, by John Eliot, a catechism, the Psalms in Indian verse, Baxter's "Call to the Unconverted," and other works were also printed here at the expense of the Society for Propagating the Gospel, and for a time, as Isaiah Thomas says, the press of Harvard college was as celebrated as the presses of Oxford and Cambridge.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT

The above subject was discussed at the recent meeting of the school superintendents in Boston, and a pleasant feature of the discussion was that all agreed that corporal punishment should be inflicted only in the most extreme cases. With the growing intelligence of this later day, love has come to have her more perfect work.

Instances are very rare in which the pupil in our public schools cannot be successfully reached by milder measures than those of the rattan and the rubber pipe. Like begets like in every department of life. To appeal to the brutal must by a natural law beget brutality. State School Superintendent Hill is on the right side of the discussion when he declares against corporal punishment. The incorrigible pupil should be sent to the reformatory school—there is where he belongs.

The difficulty, is the amount of work put upon the teacher is such that oftentimes he hardly knows which way to turn, so that in his nervous and overworked condition he does not always recognize the better way in which to discipline the pupil. It was only the other day that in one of the schools in Cambridge a woman teacher, overburdened with her many cares, tied a restless little girl to her seat, thus ignoring that law of growth to which every child of infant years is subjected. The little girl in question is one of the sweetest of children, coming from one of the best of homes; but she got tired and restless by sitting long in one position, so she "wiggled about" as she termed it, and for thus obeying one of nature's first laws, she was made fast to her seat. The late Colonel Parker wrought upon natural lines in all his school work, so he never had occasion to resort to the rattan and the rubber pipe. It is when one runs butt against nature that he is compelled to bring in brute force that he may reverse the natural order of things.

A SPIRIT OF UNREST

This everlasting tinkering with the "creed" by the Presbyterian church indicates a spirit of unrest in its religious faith. Just at present the New York Presbyterians are trying to make over the "creed" of the church so that it will suit everybody. They have undertaken however, an impossible work, and for the simple reason that men and women in this intelligent age will not accept in their confession of faith a hell "where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." Neither do men and women for the most part believe that "fear must come before love," as has recently been declared by some of our churchmen. That "creed" which has not in it a large measure of common sense, will frequently need revision.

"HE WON'T BITE"

"Oh no, my dog won't bite, so pass right along and pay no attention to him." It was only very recently that we ran up against one of these barking, snapping curs when the good lady of the house said to us "come right along and pay no attention to the dog; he never bites," and the first thing we knew the dog had his teeth dangerously near us—so we demanded of the fair owner of the dog that he should pay no further attention to us, and all this leads us to the thought we have in mind, namely: that the barking, threatening dog should not be allowed to sleep away its time on the front door steps, only to awaken to growl and howl at the approach of the stranger or other. While "every dog has his day," it should at the same time have its place and be kept in it. "My dog won't bite" has become a "chestnut."

What is that "rubber pipe" to which frequent reference was made at the recent meeting of school superintendents in Boston, and which is used more or less frequently in inflicting punishment on the body of the disobedient pupil? Is it a sort of Philippine water cure used by some of our army officers on the refractory Filipinos? And by the way, if corporal punishment in the public schools is right, why should the stubbornly disobedient girl be exempted from its infliction? There ought to be no sex in a well deserved whipping. The truth is that corporal punishment of either sex belongs to a barbarous age.

We regret exceedingly that in the hurry and push of going to press last week, several important items of news were left out of our columns. Especially do we regret that our account of the interesting and instructive series of meetings held in St. Agnes' church did not find its place in the columns of the last issue. The ENTERPRISE was represented on several evenings at these meetings, and was much interested on each occasion. Arrangements have been perfected whereby the likelihood of such contretemps' happening again will be minimized.

How about Home week for Arlington? What is being done by way of preparation for the home coming of the children?

ANDREW ROBINSON.

Andrew Robinson of 103 Franklin street died Monday, after an illness of nine weeks, from heart trouble. Mr. Robinson was born in Boston in November of 1839. At the age of twenty years he came to Arlington where he had made his home ever since. In 1895 he married Miss Nellie Colman. Mr. Robinson leaves a wife and four children, the eldest of whom is six years of age. He was a pleasant man to meet, and had drawn about him many friends who will sincerely mourn his untimely death. The funeral services of the deceased were held Wednesday morning in St. Agnes' church, Rev. John M. Mulcahy officiating.

An ENTERPRISE man worshipped at the Pleasant street Congregational church Sunday morning, and much enjoyed the service. Mr. Bushnell preached a sensible, instructive sermon.

He pleasantly referred to the series of meetings recently held in St. Agnes church, and while as he declared he never could become a Roman Catholic still he is tolerant towards all religious denominations. In his opinion it would not be safe to give unlimited power to any one of the religious organizations. The music at the Pleasant street Congregational church is a pleasant feature of its worship.

The Blue Hill Inn at Blue Hill, Maine has been purchased by J. Prescott Gage, Arlington Heights, whom everybody in Arlington knows as a stirring business man. The Blue Hill Inn is a cosy, modern hotel of fifty rooms, neatly furnished, lighted by electricity, large fire places for log-wood, fires in dining and reception rooms and parlors and halls. The "Inn" overlooks Blue Hill Bay and a wide range of picturesque country. There is no summer resort on the New England coast more delightfully situated. The grounds contain spacious lawns, croquet and tennis grounds, and tennis grounds, and an extensive range of fields and grove under the general management, and ownership of Mr. Gage. We venture that many Arlington people will find their way during the coming summer to Blue Hill Inn.

An ENTERPRISE reporter called at the home of Mrs. Crosby on Court street, Tuesday, and found her still confined to her bed, but very comfortable. She sleeps well and has a fair appetite. It is not expected that she will ever so far recover as to get upon her feet again, yet there is every reason to hope and believe that her life will be spared beyond the century mark. Mrs. Crosby will be one hundred years old on the 25th day of this coming September.

Another bicycle boom is on, according to indications from the cycle business in town. But it is not quite the same sort of boom as the one of a few years ago. There is less fad and less fashion about riding now than formerly. The wheel is taken sanely, as an economical and convenient means for judicious exercise. Bicycles are not expensive, besides, which puts it in the power of almost everybody to possess one. There is no need to go out of town to buy a good wheel at a reasonable price.

Society of Colonial Wars Makes Visit.

Triennial Expedition of Organization Includes Lexington's Historic Features in Its Tour—Visitors Entertained.

The Society of Colonial Wars visited Lexington Thursday afternoon. The society has been "doing" this section of New England pretty thoroughly at the meeting this year. About 150 members left Boston for Concord Thursday morning by special train. At about half past one the train arrived at Lexington from Concord. The party went at once to the Old Belfry club where they were given a lunch by the Lexington Historical society. At this time there were passed resolutions expressing thanks to the Lexington Historical society for its entertainment and hospitality. The company left the Old Belfry club at about three o'clock and all went up to the Old Belfry itself where the members were divided up into squads. These were taken under the charge of a committee appointed from the Historical society for the purpose, consisting of George O. Smith, president of the society, James P. Munroe, A. E. Scott, L. A. Saville, George O. Whiting, and F. S. Piper. The party then visited the many points of historical interest, in separate companies, and left on their train at about five o'clock.

T. D. Cooke of Boston catered. Mr. Holden, formerly of Lexington, was chairman of the committee on the Lexington visit. The society of Colonial Wars consists of members of historical societies from all parts of the country. It meets once in three years, and at these triennial sessions, a section of country of particular historical interest is visited. One of the members present Thursday computed that, under the present arrangement, it would be 80 years before the society would visit Lexington again. Friday they went to Plymouth.

North Lexington.

Mr. and Mrs. Burrill have again heard from their son, Charles H. Burrill, who is now in Yokohama, Japan. Mr. Burrill has sustained an injury which has compelled him to leave his vessel, the Vicksburg, and go to Yokohama to the hospital on the flag ship, New York. Mr. Burrill says that the accommodations are thoroughly up to date, and at least as luxurious, if not more so, than in the best hotel in Boston.

The Vicksburg has gone to the Philippines by way of Hong Kong; and he is not, therefore, disappointed not to go with his ship, as he "has no use for" the Philippines.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln are staying at the Orchard Hill house.

Mrs. Tapley and her son are boarding at D. B. Danforth's on Bedford road.

Mr. Sage, who recently bought the Reed farm, is making extensive improvements.

Mr. Bacon has been quite ill for a few days this week.

Joseph Money was in court for trespass, and was put under $100 bonds to keep the peace for a year.

CLOTHESPIN PARTY

The young ladies' Sodality of St. Bridget's parish gave a May festival and clothespin party in the town hall Thursday night. The affair was opened by a concert of popular music from eight until nine by P. F. Damm's philharmonic orchestra. Shortly after nine o'clock, the clothespins were distributed to the gentlemen and the search for partners began. The grand march was led by Miss Cecilia Jennings, floor directress, and Robert Moakley. They were followed by a goodly number of the more enthusiastic dancers. Miss Margaret Vaughn was the assistant floor directress; and the aids were Misses Nellie Moakley, Katherine Kierman, Gertrude Dacey, and Julia Desmond.

Some 100 couples participated in the dancing which was continued until an early hour. Refreshments were served at twelve o'clock.

ANOTHER PEST.

Destructive to Fruit Trees Especially.

The Tent Caterpillar Commencing Its Ravages—Correspondent Advises Use of Kerosene—Habits of Insect Described.

Editor Enterprise—There are caterpillars and caterpillars, but the ciliocampa Americana, or tent caterpillar, is the one that should demand our constant attention at the present time. The moth of this pest is the small reddish-brown insect which flies in at the windows and burns its wings in the lamp at night, it comes to maturity in June, then breaks camp and finds some crevice where it makes its cocoon. The eggs, deposited in rays around the twigs of trees, are hatched in April or May, and the insects spin from their mouths a large tent-like web, not unlike the web of the spider, and retire into this tent at midday and at night. They are reckoned among the most destructive insects to fruit trees, especially the apple and the cherry.

If applied at noon or at night when the insects are in their tents, kerosene poured over the nest will be found an efficient exterminator. Everyone should exhibit a public spirit and lend a helping hand to check, if not entirely stop, the ravages of these destructive insects.

RUSTICUS.

East Lexington.

Six stray cattle are waiting their owner at W. T. Sim's in East Lexington.

The stores will close at noon Memorial day.

There will be special exercises in the Adams school Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Charlotte Brown Gleason died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nelson W. Jenney, Wednesday night, at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Gleason was 96 years and six months old. For the last six years she had been confined to her chair owing to injuries resulting from an accident. Death was due to her advanced age. She leaves a brother, Mr. Brown, of East Lexington, and three daughters. She was born in East Lexington and spent her life here. Her interest in town affairs was always a keen one. The funeral services will be held at her late home this afternoon at two o'clock.

John D. Hayes and family moved Tuesday to Dorchester. Mr. Hayes sold his house to Norman Per, who will take possession soon.

The fire company responded to a still alarm for a brush fire on the north side of the East Lexington meadows, Sunday evening.

Do You Know

How lots of good money GOES WRONG? Do you know how the gold-brick man, the church deacon, the pipe-dreamer, whether by accident, accident or design, gets hold of the hard-earned money of the widow or the orphan—YOUR GOOD INSURANCE MONEY, for example.

DO YOU KNOW that you can tie it up so that those who live after you, for whom you have worked, toiled, and schemed, can have an annual income of FIVE PER CENT on the original insurance as long as they live? Is this not a wise proposition? The Equitable Life wise proposition? The Equitable Life have such a policy, and I have it for sale, come in and let me show it to you.

A DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN MUSICIAN.

The position that Boston has taken in the world of music, as a centre for the propagation of that greatest among the fine arts, is now recognized the world over. It has accomplished this in several ways. For twenty-one years it has maintained one of the greatest orchestras in the world. From that has developed opportunities for hearing chamber concerts unsurpassed in artistic excellence; there are choral societies of renown, a conservatory of eminent standing and singers, pianists, and violinists, the best from Europe, visit the city every season. Yet with all these manifold advantages one can say of Boston, "One thing thou lackest," using the quotation from holy writ.

and that is in its opportunities for hearing operatic performances in the manner of many cities in Europe. There are light opera companies of more or less excellence. The non-dramatic musical force is always with us for revenue only, and there is the annual visit of the Maurice Grau Opera Co. from the Metropolitan Opera house, New York, for two weeks, but when one has said this he has said it all.

Last season the Bijou company made an excellent attempt to give light opera at low prices, and notwithstanding many discouragements, there is to be another season next winter. But in any way that the subject is viewed the operatic problem is still unsolved. Yet there may be a solution in the near future, for there are in this country many from the sunny land of Italy, the home of the "Vocalito" style of vocal art, who having become residents among us, see the possibilities for operatic success in the future, and to such many look for the solution of this vexed operatic problem.

There is one of the Italian masters of operatic art living in the University city at present, who has recently come among us, and is a decided acquisition to the musical life of this section. Signor J. Rossari is the name of this distinguished Italian musician, and he lives at 115 Massachusetts avenue, very near Quincy square.

Signor Rossari comes of an old family long resident in Milan, in which the love of art and literature was traditional. One of his ancestors in the 16th century, Cardinal Virgilio Rossari, published a treatise of music, and another ancestor of more recent date, Gustave Rossari, was years professor of the conservatory in Milan, also director of the Municipal Military orchestra. In an interview with the writer a few days since, Signor Rossari gave some interesting features of his musical career. His earliest impressions were obtained from the use of an old virginal, but unlike many children of musical antecedents, his intuition for such things as rhythm and accent was not at first especially pronounced, though he had a good faculty for memorizing which enabled him to become familiar at an early age with such parts of Mozart's "Don Giovanni." It was from the well known Italian master, Coccia, that Signor Rossari had the foundations of his present musical knowledge. But at this time his parents desired the son to study law, instead of music—how like the experience of Schubert and several others—and he accordingly studied for some time in Turin university where he received the usual degrees in law as given at this university. But he did not abandon his music by any means. He studied his law, and he accordingly studied for some time in Turin university where he received the usual degrees in law as given at this university. But he did not abandon his music by any means. He studied his law, and he accordingly studied for some time in Turin university where he received the usual degrees in law as given at this university.

After completion of his law course Signor Rossari entered the interior department, where he remained some years. But the desire for a musical career was a strong one, and he abandoned the government service, and from that time his future career was decided upon. He studied with several eminent masters, wrote musical articles for the Milan Musical Gazette, and was one of the best of his class in Italy, and edited various collections of chamber music, beside compiling a history of melodrama.

He also directed many operatic and concert performances in various parts of Italy and in this direction was highly successful. Signor Rossari has long felt that America was a place where the future of opera was promising and this feeling led him to come to this country, where he intends to make his future home. As he has only recently been a resident of Cambridge his acquaintance among the musicians of Boston and vicinity is more or less limited, yet to those who have made his acquaintance, he impresses most favorably.

The writer has had one or two very pleasant and instructive conversations with him, and there is no doubt that Signor Rossari, beside being a gentleman of wide culture and experience generally, is in musical matters thoroughly conversant, both technically and aesthetically. He has a very large library of operatic and other scores which he knows thoroughly, and in operatic matters the writer has an experience of fifteen years with the best among resident and visiting musicians, has found none of them with a more intelligent knowledge than Signor Rossari. He believes honestly that there is a great operatic future here, and there is no doubt that he will have much influence in shaping matters to this end. Signor Rossari, whose portrait is herewith reproduced, is a worthy addition to the list of eminent musicians of his nationality that are resident in or near Boston, as Augusto Rottoli, Carlo Buonamici, Giuseppe Orsini and others.

PHOTOGRAPHIC POINTS.
The man with a small camera will sometimes make a charming little picture which he wishes to preserve, but which is not large enough to readily show its beauties. An enlargement in bromide is just the thing in such a case. Enlarging is rather a troublesome piece of work unless one has proper facilities, but there are people in the trade who make a specialty of enlarging for amateurs. A pocket kodak may be enlarged to 5x7 for about half a dollar.

The new panorama camera is proving itself quite an interesting instrument. The lens moves automatically in a half circle, taking in a wide angle of vision, just as a man in turning his head from left to right sees more of the landscape than when looking straight ahead. The mechanism seems to be perfected, and we have seen some successful negatives made in this way.

There is no more exhilarating pastime to the man who uses his brain excessively than that of pool playing. ## WHY LATE AT CHURCH?

The above query has recently been answered by an English clergyman, who has been unpleasantly impressed with the large number of tardy men and women at our American churches. The clergyman in question, after carefully considering this fault, has come to the conclusion that the prime reason of this church tardiness is to be found in the character of the church music in American churches. He says that, during a stay of nearly a year in this country, he attended worship in nearly every religious denomination, and that in the most of them the music had little or no relationship with the services conducted from the pulpit. We can believe that this criticism is largely true. Take for instance the solo and the duet so frequently sung in most of our churches just previous to the regular services. They usually partake more of the character of an operatic concert than they do of religious worship; and so it is that many men and women do not reach their pews until the morning concert is over. This English divine insists that the better way to get the full measure of instruction coming from the pulpit is to do away with these advertising and showy preliminaries. There can be no reason why church music should not be in keeping with the public worship of a Sunday; and it is safe to say that that music is the better which reaches the ear and heart of the average listener.

AN ECONOMY OF TIME

There is no business interest in all the wide world that can be managed successfully without taking into account a rigid economy of time. Minutes wasted mean in the long run hours, and these hours soon amount to days and weeks. The majority of bankruptcies in business life comes from ill management of time. Each moment wisely employed will set any business man on his feet and keep him there. Things can never go right in any department of labor until the right use of time is made one of the fundamentals.

Many people in this vicinity will remember the golden sunsets of some years ago. Those brilliantly illuminated western skies which continued for weeks were a marvelous exhibition of the exquisitely beautiful. In them were seen every tinge of the most delicate coloring. Now it is promised by some of our scientists that they are to be repeated at an early date, by reason of the recent volcanic eruptions at Martinique and St. Vincent. It is said that somewhere about the 30th of May we may look for them. We shall be sure to keep our two eyes wide open about that time.

Why is it that Sir Isaac Newton should have the credit of discovering the law of gravitation in 1685 when Shakespeare, in 1609, seventy-six years previous to Newton's time, wrote the following:

"But the strange base and building of my love,
Is as the very center of the earth, Drawing all things to it?"

Shakespeare, was surely ahead of Sir Isaac Newton in all that pertains to that great law which draws all things to a common center.

Memorial Day which occurs Friday of next week stands out as an everlasting covenant of peace between the South and the North. It is the seal of a perpetual unity. The graves of the blue and the gray alike are both the heritage of an undivided and indivisible nation. Memorial Day born of a sanguinary strife has now become an emblem of peace.

The meat riots in New York, while entirely outside of all law, ought to teach a healthful lesson in the bread and butter world. The world does owe us a living, provided we do our work faithfully and well.

Anniversary week in Boston begins next Monday so look out for rain.

All hail to the Republic of Cuba!

The beef trust must explain.

The Ladies' Aid is preparing for a fair to be held the 4th and 5th of June. Many useful and attractive articles will be for sale.

The Children's day program for June 8 promises to be exceedingly interesting and will employ the best efforts of the members of the Sunday school.

"The Citizen's Sacrifice", a Memorial sermon, will be delivered by the pastor to-morrow morning. The church will be appropriately decorated with national colors. All old soldiers and their families are cordially invited to attend.

BAPTIST CHURCH

The executive committee of the young people's society held a meeting Monday night with Mrs. S. E. Dickie.

To-morrow evening the subject will be missions, taking up Cuba in particular. Mrs. Isa G. Burrill will lead. Wednesday night the regular monthly business meeting of the church was held.

Mrs. Thomas Vigus of Los Angeles, California, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Howard Brandenburg, of Westminster avenue.

The Elerie club had its theater party Thursday night.

Miss Bartol opened her house on Claremont avenue Tuesday.

The Sunshine club will meet next week with Mrs. Doull.

The young men's league met last Thursday night with George Irving, of Lowell place.

The Farther Lights circle met Tuesday with Mrs. Isa G. Burrill.

The young people of Park avenue church gave a social Tuesday with harmony as the keynote of the evening. Music and the titles of musical compositions were made use of ingeniously to furnish entertainment for the gathering. The leading feature was the Zobeo band, composed of young ladies and the Zobeos. Chocolate, cake, and candy were served.

There was no meeting of the Sunshine club this week.

Bert Lindsay, who has been sick with rheumatism, has gone to his brother's in Stoneham.

Mr. Babcock of Claremont avenue has been confined to the house for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Ayer have gone on their vacation. On their return they will take rooms with Mr. and Mrs. Babcock.

Mr. Babcock's two valuable angora cats suddenly sickened and died Tuesday under very mysterious circumstances. One of the cats, a beautiful pure white female, was a present to Mrs. Babcock as a kitten two years ago, and was a great pet. The other cat, a magnificent yellow male, was also a very fine animal.

Everett Simpson has had to leave school on account of ill health. He will leave Monday for the Adirondacks.

Mr. and Mrs. Jernegan, having rented their place for the summer, will take rooms at John T. White's. Colonel H. W. Huguley and family will occupy Mr. Jernegan's house. Colonel Huguley was a resident of the Heights some 25 years ago.

Sunday morning Rev. John G. Taylor spoke on "The Ageless Kingdom." Geo. H. Averill sang a selection in fine voice and with sympathetic expression.

Several new names were added to the Sunday school, and new helpers to the teaching force are anticipated.

Miss Elma Bridgman led the Endeavor meeting, which gained in interest and in power to the end.

Rev. Mr. Taylor was called to officiate at a funeral at East Weymouth, Monday afternoon.

The Suffolk North association has selected the pastor of Park Avenue church as its representative at the examination of the Andover Theological seminary in June.

Next Tuesday the Suffolk North association will be entertained by Mr. Taylor, with the assistance of his young people. About 30 will be present, and Prof. J. H. Popes, of Harvard, and Rev. G. W. Brooks, of Dorchester, will read papers. This will be the first time that the association has met with the Park Avenue church. The young people are preparing an appetizing supper for the hungry parsons.

Children's day is being arranged for and will be full of interest.

The picnic is engaging the committee to its full ability.

"Practical Righteousness" gave to the Friday evening meeting a helpful current.

A garden club was organized at the home of Mrs. Marion A. MacBride, on Thursday. Ladies attending were enthusiastic in a discussion of plants, trees and fertilizer. The bulletins issued of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., were used as a basis for work in the study of soil, plant life and trees. After some discussion, it was decided to begin work at once, by doing everything possible to have worm nests on the trees destroyed, as many have appeared on trees apparently free and clear before the leaves came out. Co-operation with the Village Improvement society, school-house grounds and flowers for the summer missions in Boston filled the plan as outlined. The ladies will meet again Monday afternoon, May 26, at 3 p.m., when any neighbors interested in flowers will be welcome. The meetings at present will be held with Mrs. MacBride, at 26 Hillside avenue.

Last Monday night an Anti-cigarette league was organized at the home of Rev. Wm. H. Lannin, 8 Aerial street, Arlington Heights, with 12 charter members. This will be connected with the National American Anti-cigarette league, which has its headquarters in Chicago. Any boy may join by calling on the superintendent, Mrs. Lannin.

MISSION CLOSED.

Last Sunday evening the last of the course of lectures by Father Xavier Sutton to non-Catholics was given in St. Agnes' church. Father Sutton made an earnest and eloquent address to a large concourse of people on "Why I am a Catholic." The special choir of young girls sang several well known hymns. After the lecture, the benediction service was said, the regular choir rendering the musical part most effectively. William Kelly also sang the "Ave Maria."

This meeting ended a series of unique and interesting gatherings. For eight consecutive nights St. Agnes' church was filled by an audience of representative Arlington people, protestant and catholic alike, and at one of the meetings the auditorium was packed, extra seats being needed to accommodate the 1200 persons present.

SCHOOL NOTES

Superintendent Sutcliffe and those officially associated with him in the management of the Arlington public schools, are philosophically right in planning and working for not over thirty pupils to any one teacher. President Tuttle of the school board informed a reporter of the ENTERPRISE the other day that Arlington will be compelled by state law to have for the coming year a school superintendent whose duties will be those of superintendent alone; and besides, the superintendent will have charge of all the schools, so that another year superintendent Sutcliffe will have added to his present supervisory work the high school.

Superintendent Sutcliffe will be in need of three or four new teachers for the coming year.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL EXERCISES.

Next Thursday afternoon memorial exercises will be held in the grammar schools as follows: At 2 o'clock in Crosby school, song by the school; lessons in patriotism, including the salute to the flag; concert recitations, by the school; five minute speech by representative of the G. A. R.; semi-chorus. At 2:30 o'clock in Russell school, Gettysburg address; recitations; soldiers' monument; recitations; speech by representative from G. A. R.; Keller's American hymn. At 3 o'clock in Cutter school, song by the school; flag exercise; address by G. A. R. representative. At 3:30 o'clock in Locke school, song by school; roll call; address by G. A. R. representative; "America," by school.

A. H. S. NOTES.

The game last week Friday afternoon with Melrose was forfeited to Arlington, 9 to 0. For eight innings the crowd was treated to an interesting game. The score stood 9 to 6 in the last of the eighth; Arlington at bat. With two out, one man on third, and Hillard on first, Moore sent the ball out over third base. It struck in the field and bounded out over the wall. Two runs were scored, and fairly so according to local ground rules, but Melrose refused to allow more than two bases on the hit, and left the field, thus forfeiting the game.

The high school team won by a score of 12 to 0 from Browne & Nichols. Monday afternoon, on the links of the Arlington Golf club, in the interscholastic league series. The Arlington team was made up of G. H. Gray, M. F. Cushman, R. S. Dunbar and J. C. Gray.

Medford beat Arlington high Tuesday afternoon on Lawrence field, 12 to 8. A good crowd was out, and both sides were well supported by rooters. Mills, in the first inning, broke his left ankle by running into the fence on right field, on Crane's home run. Merry, of Medford, in the eighth, was also put out of commission at first by a fall. The game was close at times, but Arlington lost several good opportunities for runs by poor generalship.

HOOD FARM AUCTION SALE OF JERSEYS AND BERKSHIRES

Hood Farm, Lowell, Mass., is so well known to the readers of this paper that it is not necessary to go into details in regard to the high quality of the stock owned at that great breeding establishment. June 11 and 12, 1902, they will sell to the highest bidder 180 head of Jersey cattle and 125 Berkshire hogs. This is the greatest sale of the kind ever held in New England. There is such a large number and many of the calves are so young that those who do not wish to pay the high prices usually brought by registered stock will be able to get some very desirable individuals at a great bargain. Every dairyman and farmer can afford to get something to enrich his herd, either a bull, a heifer or a pig. It is the opportunity of a lifetime. Those who cannot go, but have friends who will attend, should commission them to use their judgment in selecting something from these famous herds. The catalogue which Hood Farm has published gives a great deal of information to those interested in Jerseys and Berkshires, and it is a work of art. It will be sent to all who write for it.

There is also shown a variety of text books and instruments used in the many courses of this school."

Postmaster Holt has just put into the postoffice the old mahogany desk which he purchased in 1860 for his business office in Boston. The desk is now in excellent condition—indeed, as good as new. Mr. Holt values it highly.

Ellen M. Marden has received a pension, special accrued.

Messrs. W. D. Rockwood and W. B. Gordon, of Circle lodge, and J. Stedman, of Lebanon lodge, A. O. U. W., were among the guests of Waltham lodge, Thursday evening, when the members of that lodge tendered a reception to its original charter members on the occasion of the 21st anniversary of the institution of that lodge. The lodge is a flourishing body of about 600 members, and about 300 workmen, including several visiting delegations from sister lodges, were present and partook of the fraternal hospitality of the Watch city brothers. Mr. Rockwood, as deputy grand master workman of this lodge, has many reasons to take justifiable pride in his charge.

An ordination was held at St. Peter's, Cambridge, Friday morning, when the bishop, the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, advanced seven deacons to the priesthood.

Attention is called to the advertisement calling for a situation in a hotel or boarding house by a married couple. Anyone desiring such help will do well to respond at once.

Howard Hawkins is planning a trip to Vermont for a week's outing.
